Defining, Producing, Performing, Consuming, and Theorizing Serials and Adaptations

A Zoom Symposium, 14–15 September 2023

Organizers: Julie Grossman (Le Moyne College), Thomas Leitch (University of Delaware),
Iain Robert Smith (King's College), Constantine Verevis (Monash University)

This two-day Zoom symposium, hosted by the University of Delaware, brings scholars of adaptation and seriality into an open conversation with one another, not by recommending a single master set of terms or procedures for adaptation and seriality, still less by seeking to absorb either one of them into the other, but rather by raising questions of common concern to both fields and encouraging practitioners in both to share their views and facilitate collaboration.

The symposium features four x 75-minute roundtables, held over two days, 14–15 September 2023.

Each roundtable begins with brief presentations of 5-7 minutes by scholars of seriality and adaptation, followed by a discussion in which both panelists and attendees are invited to participate.
